Although aardvarks look like anteaters, they are actually related to elephants! But wait what's an aardvark? The unusual mammal called the aardvark was named by South Africans in the 1880s. In the local language, Afrikaans, 'aardvark' means 'earth pig'. This name quite accurately describes a large, heavily built animal with thin hair and short legs, that looks much like a pig. Aardvarks live in dry places like Africa, south of the Sahara Desert. The aardvark can reach a length of 1.8 metres. Its head has huge donkeylike ears, a long snout, and drooping eyelids with long eyelashes. Aardvarks prefer to sleep during the day in an underground burrow. At night, they dig underground for their favourite food: termites. They break open the termites' nests with their massive, flattened claws and then suck up the insects. Female aardvarks give birth to one baby every year. A few weeks after it is born, the baby aardvark begins to follow its mother around. It goes off to live on its own before it is one year old.
